PREFACE

Classification systems that are based primarily on subject matter must take into account several categories of works too general or comprehensive to be classified with any particular subject, however broad. These are the categories provided for in Class A, General Works. Their precedence in the order of the classes conforms to the logic of the classification system, which proceeds, as a whole as well as in its parts, from the general to the specific.

It would be difficult if not impossible to determine the precise order in which the subclasses should stand and they are therefore arranged in alphabetical order: AC, Collections; AE, Encyclopedias; AM, Museums, etc. Subclass AZ is the only exception, being too miscellaneous in content for a satisfactory general caption.

The fourth edition includes all changes and additions through September 1972. Editorial staff members who worked on this schedule are Emma E. Curtis, Dorothy V. Artis, Margaret J. Bass, Lawrence H. Buzard, Linda C. Sorkin, and Janet S. Walden.
